It is important to remember that the article should not be subject to evaluation in other journals, and that it should be original. In this sense, AGER carries out anti-plagiarism analysis before submitting an article for external evaluation.

Authors who have published with AGER accept the following terms:

1. Authors will retain their copyright and guarantee the journal the right of first publication of their work, which will be simultaneously subject to the Creative Commons recognition license that allows third parties to share the work as long as its author is indicated and its first publication in AGER.
2. Authors may adopt other non-exclusive license agreements for the distribution of the version of the published work (e.g., deposit it in an institutional telematics archive or publish it in a monographic volume) provided that the initial publication in this journal is indicated.
3. Authors are permitted and encouraged to disseminate their work through the Internet (e.g., in institutional telematics archives or on their website), which may lead to interesting exchanges and increased citations of the published work. (See The Effect of Open Access).

PRIVACY STATEMENT
